Dear Ruth:

I thought you would like to have a copy of the attached booklet prepared by the Veterans of Strategic Services commemorating the visit of the French Resistance people this summer. We think that the visit went very well, and were very happy that you could be present and participate.

We will be sending out invitations shortly for the cornerstone ceremonies for the new building. I do hope that you will be able to accept this invitation.

With very best wishes.

Sincerely,

Mr. John W. Davis

Dear Mr. Davis:

In behalf of Mr. Dulles, I would like to acknowledge and thank you for your letter of 7 October concerning your suggestion for the establishment of a new Texas National Guard Division.

This is a matter which does not fall within the purview of the Central Intelligence Agency. However, your courtesy in writing to us is indeed appreciated.

Sincerely,

Signed

Dear sir:

I attended Texas A. & M. in 1945 and while there learned that to call the college "Texas" A. & M. is a mockery to the people of Texas, since all graduates of A. & M. enter the army reserves or air corps reserves controlled strictly by our federal government in Washington. I have talked to many students at A. & M. who are of the same opinion, realizing that in a day's notice they may be "jerked up" and sent to Korea, Formosa, or Berlin by the Secretary of Defense after graduation.

As you know, the sons of thousands of Texas farmers and ranchers attend Texas A. & M., since A. & M. has the best agricultural department of any college in the state of Texas. Still, when they graduate, becoming second lieutenants in the army reserves, they lose their personal liberty as Texas citizens because all members of the army reserves and air corps reserves are under the jurisdiction of the defense department in Washington, which can "call them up" to active duty immediately after the outbreak of hostilities in "unheard of" distant lands.

As a result of this unfortunate situation, I strongly believe that a new Texas National Guard Division should be formed, calling the Division the "Lone Star Division" comprised of graduates from Texas A. & M. Classified as Texas army reservists and commanded by the governor of Texas. In this way, the graduates of Texas A. M. C. will be servants primarily to the people of Texas and not controlled subjects of military men in Washington, D. C.

Sincerely,
John W. Davis
